COOLIDGE NOT IN FAVOR OF ARMAMENT MEETING

Conditions in Europe Not Right For Conference, President's Belief

WASHINGTON, June 6.—President Coolidge still feels that conditions in Europe are not sufficiently settled to issue a call for another limitation of armament conference, it was declared officially here today.

As a result of statements in administration circles last night, voicing approval of a conference to outlaw the use of poison gas in warfare, the impression prevailed that the president was planning to call a general armament conference in the near future. Officials explained today, however, that, while desirous of making another move for the reduction of armaments throughout the world, in accordance with his promises in the last political campaign, the president believed that a conference at this time would be useless unless conditions were materially changed in Europe.

EVOLUTION THEORY RECEIVES DEFENSE BY SON OF DARWIN

Attack Is Retrograde Movement and Will Fade Away, Says Scientist, In Expressing His Opinion

By DAVID M. CHURCH
For International News Service, Copyright, 1925
CRIPPS CORNER, Sussex, England, June 6.—Another Darwin arose today in the defense of evolution. It was Major Leonard Darwin, 75-year-old son of Charles Darwin, father of the theory. The son of the famous scientist has shown keen interest in the approaching trial of John Scopes, Tennessee schoolmaster, on the charge of teaching evolution. He smiled when asked his opinion. But his reply crackled with youthful vigor.

Seated in a huge arm chair in his Tudor home, five miles from the railroad, Major Darwin gave his views in an exclusive interview with International News Service.

"This attack on evolution is a retrograde movement," he said. "But it is only a passing phase which will fade away. No scientists dispute evolution, although they may argue in regard to the manner in which evolution came about."

No Break In Series
"Every human being originates from a child and originally from a germ or small particle of organic matter. In the process of development from the original form there is no break in the series. We cannot say where mind or consciousness begins, yet no one thinks that in this development we find anything contrary to spiritual ideals."

Nor does the son of the pioneer in the field of evolution think there should be any clash between the adherents of it and the church. "Evolution of man from some lower organism has followed a similar path," Major Darwin continued. "And there is absolutely nothing contrary to religious ideals in the evolution of man from an unreasoning animal more than there is in the development of man from an unreasoning baby."

Remain Calm, Plea
"My father was subject to a certain amount of abuse when he published his work. He took it quite calmly. The attacks died down."

Men will meet these cruel attacks in the same fearless spirit and I am certain that it will be with the same results."

Major Darwin himself is a scientist and economist of note, former president of the Royal Geographical society and author of economic text books.

NEW MARK IN MILE SET AT STAGG FIELD CONTESTS

Cox, Rochester High School, New York, Negotiates Distance In 4:22 2-10

STAGG FIELD, CHICAGO, June 6.—Rube Foster, from Wenatchee, Wash., popped open the national interscholastic meet today by tying the world's prep record for the 100-yard dash. He did the century in 9.45 seconds in winning his semi-final heat.

After tying the world's prep record, Foster duplicated his feat by winning the event in 9.45 seconds. Draper of Fort Worth, Texas, was second.

Cox, Rochester high school, New York, and member of the 1924 Olympic team, broke the world's interscholastic record for a mile when he ran the distance in the prep school tournament here this afternoon in 4:22 2-10. The old mark was 4:23 3-5.

Herbert Fleischbach, jr., Menlo Park high school, California's only entrant, won the twelve-pound shot with a distance of 50 feet 1 1-4 inches.

Kaiser, Wenatchee, Wash., won the mile run in 4:28 1-10. With ten events decided, Wenatchee, Wash., and Kokomo, Ind., were deadlocked for top place among the high schools, with thirteen points each.

Walters of Kokomo, who ranks as high point man for the meet, was responsible for all his school's points. He scored firsts in the 220 and 440 and third in the 100. Foster of Wenatchee, with his first in the century, and Kaiser, with a first in the mile and a third in the half, accounted for the apple school points.

Schwarze of Wisconsin, broke a Big Ten conference record which has stood for twenty-one years when he put the shot 48 feet 1 1-4 inches in try for record, after winning the event. The former record was made by Ralph Rose of Michigan in 1904 with a throw of 47 feet 1/4 inch.

Geiser, the president's personal stenographer.

Despite Mr. Coolidge's efforts, the presidential party will make the trip on what amounts to a special train. MORE VICTIMS BEING ADDED HOURLY AND NO RELIEF IN SIGHT

Prostrated Persons. Crowd Hospitals; Water Supply Low In Baltimore

Death and relentless heat stalked hand in hand through the scorched states from the Rocky mountains to the Atlantic seaboard today, as the unbroken week of torrid weather drew toward its breathless close.

Hope of relief from record temperatures was still remote as the thermometer mounted to new heights. New victims were added hourly to the death list already past the 200 mark. Hospitals were crowded with the stricken, while overworked physicians and nurses struggled to give aid to the prostrated. With 235 dead at dawn today's deaths were expected to send the total far higher before sunset.

Thirty-one deaths were a total of New York's list. Four were dead in Chicago with records for June temperatures broken and still higher marks expected this afternoon.

Eleven died in Ohio, bringing that state's total to thirty-four. Springfield recorded a temperature of 106.

Five deaths brought Detroit's total to thirteen in the hottest weather in a decade.

Another death at dawn added to yesterday's twelve, brought the hot wave's fatalities to twenty-three in Philadelphia, where the thermometer stood at 100 yesterday.

Many towns in Indiana faced a serious water shortage and millions in crops in that state were reported ruined by drought.

Nine Die In Baltimore From Heat In 48 Hours

BALTIMORE, June 6.—With the thermometer at 97 degrees and still climbing this afternoon, the torrid heat wave had claimed nine lives in Baltimore in the last forty-eight hours.

Boston was the hottest spot in New England today with the mercury climbing above the 86 degree mark and Eastport, Maine, the coolest with 49.

Maximum Temperature Of 107 In Washington

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Heat records continued to be smashed here today as thermometers began another climb to the temperature of 107 degrees registered on Pennsylvania avenue Friday afternoon.

The only hope of relief held out by the United States weather bureau was probable frosts in the northwestern states, with resulting cooler weather in the eastern states. Two deaths due to the heat occurred during the past twenty-four hours and there were scores of prostrations.

AMERICA DENIES THREAT ON LOANS

Fixed Policy to Discourage Flotation Abroad Is Only Rumor, Claim

By DAVID LAWRENCE
Special Correspondent of The Glendale Evening News, Copyright, 1925.
WASHINGTON, June 6.—The United States Government has not yet interfered with the flotation of any important loans by American bankers to foreign powers. Nor is there a fixed policy to discourage loans that may be requested.

This is a nutshell is the status of the foreign loan question notwithstanding the many rumors, reports and informal threats that have been published in the last few months in connection with the failure of allied governments to make arrangements for the funding of their war debts to the United States.

Ever since March 3, 1922, when the Harding-Hughes administration issued a statement calling upon all bankers to consult the department of state before making any foreign loans there has been a voluminous correspondence with private bankers and many informal conversations. In practically every case the procedure has been for the state department to submit the matter to the treasury department and department of commerce to learn if either of those departments had any objection. The advice finally rendered by the state department to the bankers has never been published but it may be said that the number of instances in which loans have been discouraged have been few and far between and have usually related to circumstances other than the delay of foreign government to fund war debts.

Broadly Speaking
Only in the case of a small European country did the government here discourage the request for a private loan pointing out that the country in question had not fulfilled its promise to give the United States equal opportunity in relation to the distribution of the funds of a previous loan. None of the large European countries have made any requests through private bankers that have been discouraged. This does not mean that this step will never be taken. It does mean however, that before the United States government does so to the extreme of preventing a European power from borrowing funds the country in question will have had to pursue a policy which it is inconceivable here will ever be pursued, namely, refuse to make any arrangement or serious effort to arrange for funding of existing debts.

Broadly speaking, the American government has told private bankers that it is the desire of the United States to see borrowing countries balance their budgets and tax their people to make up deficits rather than seek funds here but that nations which are making real efforts in that direction could be and should be helped.

The talk of stopping foreign loans is, therefore, largely a reminder of what might happen if European governments neglected their manifest obligations to the United States and is at present aimed more at the smaller countries than at the larger ones. One point is constantly emphasized, namely, that the United States recognizes no priority to other countries. Thus, if funds are available to pay Great Britain, and America is given no payment, it will be felt here that the United States has been neglected, and that requests for loans through private bankers must necessarily be subject to the most serious consideration in the light of those circumstances.

All in all, the private bankers of America are co-operating with the government here and are following the advice given by the department of state. In a few instances about two years ago where the procedure was not known to some of the smaller banking firms, the department of state was not consulted but now the policy of the department is fully known and recognized. There is no law compelling bankers to consult the government here or to heed its advice but they are doing so for patriotic reasons and because an objection voiced by the government might in turn discourage prospective investors.

STATE LABOR LAW RAPPED IN CASE

Attorney Declares Measure Unconstitutional When Local Trial Held

Attacking the California labor law as unconstitutional, on the grounds that it provides for imprisonment for debt, Attorney Rush Meadows, at liberty under $35,000 bonds on federal indictments, yesterday defended his father, Okey Meadows, in the court of Police Judge F. H. Lowe. The elder Meadows was on trial for violation of the state labor law, although because of illness the defendant himself did not appear in court.

Judge Lowe ordered Meadows and attorneys for the State Labor bureau to file briefs, after which he will make his decision. Because of the importance of Meadows' move, it is expected that the matter will be carried to higher courts in the event of an adverse decision for the defendant.

As far as known, it is the first time in the history of the labor law that its constitutionality has been questioned. The statute makes failure to pay wages due to employees a misdemeanor, punishable by fine or imprisonment or both.

Albert Cawood, former manager of a local cafe, who was arrested yesterday at his home in Los Angeles, 526 East Sixth street, on a charge of violation of the state labor law, today was sentenced to thirty days in the county jail on each of two counts to which he pleaded guilty. Judge Lowe suspended the sixty-day jail term and placed Cawood on parole for two years, to report to the court every thirty days during that period.

He was alleged by the State Labor bureau to have failed to pay wages due musicians and others employed at a local cafe. He agreed today to pay all the wage claims pending against him.

RADIO PICTURES AVAILABLE TO ALL

Dr. C. F. Jenkins, Inventor,
To Make Device Possible
For Amateurs

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Dr. C. Francis Jenkins, inventor of a system of radio photography, has completed plans for making his device available for the use of amateurs throughout the country in an endeavor to further perfect the wireless transmission of pictures.

Dr. Jenkins proposes to supply the radio photographic transmitters to amateurs at less than the actual cost of building the sets. The Amateur Relay League is co-operating with the scientist and it is expected that the summer will witness an interesting season of pictures in the air. The department of commerce, it is understood, looks favorably on the project and probably will issue a regulation permitting the operation of the picture transmitters on the wave lengths in the amateur bands.

According to Dr. Jenkins, the transmission of pictures on the amateur wave lengths will not cause any interference with broadcasting or the regular transmission of C. W. messages by the amateurs. His device is used for both transmission and reception, and will work with any other type on any wave length.

Photo Transmission
"The wireless transmission of pictures is still in its infancy," Dr. Jenkins said, "and by obtaining the co-operation of the amateurs we will be able to make considerable more rapid progress in the development of the art than if it were left to the few workers in any one laboratory. But, permitting the amateurs to use the device, I consider that I am increasing my laboratory force by just as many assistants as take up the work of experimentation with the transmitters."

Exports of radio apparatus from the United States to foreign countries during the first four months of this year were more than double those of 1924, it was announced today at the department of commerce. Exports for the four months of 1925 amounted to $2,720,126, as against $1,222,635 in 1924. The most surprising feature of this year's exports was the record of $853,145 set in April, during which months exports for the past three years have shown notable declines.

REAL SERVICE

Service, cheerful service, as understood in the modern world today, is not a commodity, and therefore, is not sold in the open market where it can be purchased at will. It is that almost intangible something, which can hardly be classified or defined, that is given freely and willingly without the desire or purpose of securing a reward. Though it comes with the commodity, it is not part of the purchase; it is contributed intelligence; it is the helping hand; it is good will reversed, something going out from one person to the other; it is of the spirit, and from the spirit, and it is the finest thing to conceive of to those who render true service for they are the real servants of their fellowmen.

It is conservatively estimated that 100,000 American tourists will visit France between May and September of this year and will spend a total of $100,000,000 while there.

FOUR ESCAPE DEATH AS TRENCH CAVES IN

Workman Rescued After Being Buried Over Three Hours; Max Moore of Alhambra Killed in Slide

Buried alive for three hours and ten minutes, unable to move, but conscious the whole time, Manuel Pombo, 27, was rescued from the bottom of a sixteen-foot sewer ditch at 5 o'clock last night, after a disastrous cave-in had caught and killed one of his fellow workmen and narrowly missed crushing to death under tons of earth and asphaltic Concrete paving blocks three other workmen.

The cave-in occurred in the sewer trench being dug on Colorado street between Central avenue and Columbus avenue, where pipes are being replaced. The men in the trench were working on line 4, the Glenade intercepting sewer. The crash came at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon as a freak storm broke over the city.

J. C. Hicks, Glendale contractor who was in charge of the sewer work, suffered a nervous collapse last night after Pombo, the last man in the trench, was rescued.

No bones were broken. Apparently he had not been injured except from the exhaustion and the nervous strain. After the first two hours he heard the volunteers digging in the trench near him, and breaking up with sledge hammers the heavy block of pavement.

VOLUME XX NUMBER 242

Daily Greeting to News Readers

IT IS ALL RIGHT—
To save for a rainy day, but you don't need to make it rain for others.
To own your own home, but it costs more than money.
To let charity begin at home if it does not become a hermit.
To expect boys to be boys, but eventually they will be men.
To say we worship nature, but we must not forget God, who designed nature.

RIGHTS OF CHILDHOOD

It is wise to train children to have high ideals and teach them to admire and emulate those who have achieved fame. But there is a sort of pseudo-hero worship prevalent today that is not good for the younger generation. It is not so much accomplishment that is highly regarded as wealth, especially if this wealth is used lavishly and ostentatiously. This is probably due to the rapid rise of many people as screen actors and the possibility that riches and renown can be achieved overnight on the screen.

Leaving out of the question entirely the morals and the ability of people in the movies, it is not wise for parents to point out these people as examples for their children. Those who have won renown upon the screen would be the first to say that the business of parents is to give their children the best education possible and then let them select their own calling in life.

It is sweet to hear the applause as little Mary or Billy appears upon the stage or screen and there are some little Marys and Billys who are born to be famous through this medium. But for a parent to force a child into such a life is cruel in the extreme. Of course through the eyes of parenthood all children are talented and when a mother or father forgets that the best thing for a child is normal childhood then these talents of grace and beauty which all children possess to a greater or less extent are apt to loom too large in their eyes. There is nothing so pitiful as a child deprived of childhood. How we pity men and women who tell us that they had no pleasures when they were children, that they had to get out at an early age and not only support themselves but help their parents. They were robbed of that to which every child that comes into the world is entitled. The modern little boy or girl who puts in grilling hours before the camera is as much to be pitied as those who bend their little backs in field or factory, even though the former can support their parents in greater luxury.

LEGISLATIVE DESPOTISM

The state of Oregon has lost its fight in the Supreme Court to compel children to attend only public schools, and this was to be expected. There is a certain point beyond which the state or the federal government should not be allowed to go in regulating the lives of the people. Public schools and compulsory education are for the good of the people but if parents wish to send their children to church schools or private schools of any kind that should be their own concern.

In a way there is nothing that can take the place of the public school in the life of the child no matter what subjects or courses are taught. It is the great juvenile democracy, where lessons of "give and take" are learned early in life. The physical examinations and other regulations to which children must submit in the public schools may be beneficial in their results but there are people who object to them and they are just as conscientious and have as much right to their opinion as those who favor them. Then, there are those who wish their children to have religious instruction in school. Others prefer the private school because wealth has made them snobbish. Whatever the reason, it is their right to educate their children where they wish.

We are a free people and our freedom should endure in all things where it does not interfere with the rights of others. Such a law as Oregon wished to foist upon the people is contrary to the principles of our government.

STYLES FOR MEN

The college boy, the broker who winters at Palm Beach or Deauville, and the vaudeville performer set the styles for men, according to a big wholesale clothing manufacturer in New York. This firm keeps two "spotters" at Princeton to note the new things the college boys wear. They saw three boys on the campus wearing yellow corduroy knickers and now young men all over the country are wearing yellow corduroy knickers. Boys in high school and young men about town copy the clothes the college boys wear when they come home.

Likewise big business men who winter in the expensive resorts of America and Europe set the styles for the balance of Wall street as well as for business men all over the country. Stage and screen idols are wont to create new and bizarre effects in dress and these are copied and modified for the sporty young men.

It matters little where the designers and manufacturers go for their ideas. They set the styles arbitrarily and we follow them slavishly, not so much because we wish to appear as Beau Brummels as because we have to buy what the retailer has to sell and he in turn takes what the manufacturer has fashioned.

SENATE NEEDS

"What the United States Senate needs is a man of the calibre of Thomas B. Reed," says the New York Herald-Tribune. The same conditions which prevail in the Senate today prevailed in the lower house in 1892 when Speaker Reed practically abolished filibustering. Of course Reed was able to do this because of the rules which then existed in the House. The vice-president had not then and has not now any actual voice in directly shaping the rules of the Senate. But Dawes may be able to accomplish indirectly what he cannot do directly. The Fargo, N. D., Forum declares that by taking the matter to the people in his characteristic plain-spoken way, he stands a good chance to make dilatory debate and filibustering in the Senate mighty unpopular. "Individual Senators have railed at the vice-president without answering his arguments," says the Forum. "It must be remembered, however, that the Senate has not recently shown any great astuteness in reading correctly the signs of popular sentiment. It needs to be stirred into action, as the vice-president is proposing to do. More power to him."

It is estimated that Americans will spend $600,000,000 in Europe this summer. Yet Europeans think we are disinclined to help them.

Ten Great Spiritual Discoveries

By DR. FRANK CRANE

H. G. Wells recently gave a list of ten great discoveries.

Dr. H. C. Culbertson of Los Angeles replies to this list with ten spiritual discoveries which he has noted.

First of all there is our idea of God. Somehow this has grown up in the human race and has had much to do with its moulding.

It has often been the inspiration of much cruelty, but it has also been the foundation of all that is good.

The second discovery is that of sacrifice. Originally conceived sacrifice of some other life for our own has developed into the idea of self-sacrifice and has done much good to humanity.

The third discovery is that of immortality. As far back as history goes man always had the idea of some form of immortality, and they probably always will have it.

Fourth is the idea of taboo—of something that should be done and something that should not be done. This is the origin of conscience, or the feeling of "ought" within a person.

The fifth idea that Dr. Culbertson mentions is the God-man, or a divinely human person, a mediator between God and man.

The sixth idea is that of brotherliness as applied to the whole human race. This is expanded from the sense of brotherliness within the tribe.

The seventh idea is that of evolution, or the plan of life from the beginning, the development of one type out of another.

The eighth idea is that our human social institutions are plastic and modifiable. Through new ideals and standards it is possible to modify all of the institutions of civilization, just as slavery and monarchy and other institutions have been done away with.

The ninth idea is the discovery of the subconscious mind, or the inherited instincts beneath the consciousness.

The tenth idea is that of psychic phenomena, not as exploited by the unscrupulous, but as investigated by trained scientific thinkers.

One of the most remarkable roads of human progress is that marked by the moral development of the race, and these ten ideas of Dr. Culbertson may serve as landmarks.

Horoscope

This is read as rather an unfortunate day, for the Sun in evil place dominates while Jupiter and Mars are also adverse. Under this rule persons who rule the destinies of their fellow men are likely to be arrogant and disinclined to be even fair. It is not an auspicious time to seek any sort of a promotion from the rulers of the economic world and certainly an unlucky day for planning vacations.

Egotism may manifest itself strongly under this planetary government, which is helpful to all who put high value on themselves.

There is likely to be great discontent among the people of many countries and war looms in certain places.

This is not an auspicious rule under which to bestow gifts, and engagement rings may be especially unlucky.

Jupiter gives warning to be very conservative in all business matters, for a period of quiet in various activities may extend into the autumn.

There is a sign read as indicating troubles centering around the manufacture of firearms and other products that are needed in war.

For the United States there will be great power that will weigh on the commercial side of war.

The president of the United States and other men high in government affairs will come under unfavorable criticism, because of their pronounced views on peace, it is foretold.

If the signs are read aright there will be supreme tests for the head of the American people and the name of Coolidge is to be of lasting fame, the seers predict.

Oncoming opposition between the Moon and the Sun weakens whatever friendly influences the planetary government of this day affords.

For general affairs the afternoon is more favorable than the morning and it is well to be especially cautious after 1 o'clock.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have rather a troublesome year before them, but it is possible to overcome all difficulties. Children born on this day may

Today's Poem

SILENCE
There is a silence where hath been no sound;
There is a silence where no sound may be;
In the cold grave, under the deep, deep sea,
Or in wide desert, where no life is found.
Which hath been mute, and still must mute profound,
No voice is hushed, no life treads silently;
But cloud, and cloudy shadows wander free,
That never spoke, over the idle ground.
But in green ruins, in the desolate walls
Of antique palaces, where Man hath been,
Though the dun fox, or wild hyena, calls,
And owls, that flit continually between,
Shriek to the echo, and the low winds moan,
There the true Silence is, self-conscious and alone.

The Best of Advice

By CLARK KINNAIRD

In the writings of all the wisest men you would find some such observation as this:

Care should be taken not to build the happiness of life upon a "broad foundation," not to require a great many things in order to be happy.

Happiness on such a foundation is most easily undermined; it offers many more opportunities for accidents; and accidents are always happening.

Our life, it has been observed, is like a journey on which, as we advance, the landscape takes a different view from that which it presented at first, and changes again, as we come nearer.

This is just what happens—especially with our wishes.

We often find something else, even something better than we were looking for; and what we look for, we often find on a very different path from that on which we began a vain search.

Again, instead of finding, as we expected, pleasure, happiness, joy, we often acquire experience, insight, knowledge—a real and permanent blessing.

"Men of any worth or value soon come to see that they are in the hands of fate, and, gratefully submit to be moulded by its teachings," Schopenhauer opines.

"They recognize that the fruit of life is experience, and not happiness; they become accustomed and content to exchange hope for insight; and in the end they can say, with Petrarch, that all they care for is to learn."

"It may even be that they to some extent still follow their old wishes and aims, trifling with them, as it were, for the sake of appearances all the while really and seriously looking for nothing but instruction; a process which lends them an air of genius, a trait of something contemplative and sublime."

In their search for gold, the alchemists discovered other things—gunpowder, china, medicines, the laws of nature.

There is a sense in which we are all alchemists.

Timely Views

It is fifteen years this month since Princess Mary of Teck became Queen Mary of England, although it was not until June 22, 1911, that she knelt on the Falkland Islands amidst a brilliant assembly in Westminster Abbey to be crowned and receive the ivory rod with the dove and the sceptre.

The popular daughter of the Duchess of Teck was one day to be queen. She was betrothed to the Duke of Clarence, eldest son of King Edward VII, at that time Prince of Wales; after his death she became engaged to the Duke of York, whom she married at St. James palace on July 6, 1893, amid great popular rejoicings.

The many public duties of Queen Mary have not prevented her from being a devoted mother to her four sons and one daughter. Princess Mary, whose two small children are her great delight. Moreover, she is a careful housewife and gives personal supervision to the housekeeping. There are anecdotes of the consternation that reigned in the servants' hall the first time she descended to the royal kitchens.

The Duchess of Teck had regularly visited her kitchens at White Lodge, where the present Duke and Duchess of York now live, and her daughter saw no reason why she should not do the same.

Moreover—particularly since the war, when the king and queen set the example to the nation in rationing and economy—the queen personally checks tradesmen's bills, comparing them with the market reports. On occasion not only does the queen give orders, but personally demonstrates how things should be done.

The Queen of England is every inch the queen, always quietly dignified. But this does not mean that she is unbending and unapproachable. A frequent scene at Buckingham palace garden parties last year was Miss Margaret Bondfield, then a member of the House of Commons, in simple tailored suit and white-collared blouse, holding animated, friendly conversation with her majesty.

MIDWEST STARTS MOSQUITO DRIVE

War of Extinction Waged on Pest In Chicago by Panama Experts

By OWEN L. SCOTT

Special Correspondent of The Glendale Evening News, Copyright, 1925.

CHICAGO, June 6.—A war of extinction has been declared here on that man-eating insect, the American mosquito—the bane of summer life through a good share of this country.

Experts from Panama, who have routed the vicious hordes on their own chosen battleground, are here to launch their first offensive against the man-eaters of Chicago and its environs. Success here is expected to result in similar drives in other parts where life is made a misery by onslaughts of these jabbing insects.

Suburbs of the city are credited with the initiative in the big drive. Last summer was a summer of suffering for residents in outlying districts where numbers of less swarms of mosquitoes swarmed down on the district to make life outdoors almost unbearable.

Throughout the middlewest a similar condition prevailed. Never had the region seen such unrelenting attacks from an insect foe.

This year, good and early, leaders in the suburban districts laid plans to prevent a recurrence. A campaign for funds was set under way with women selling "a dollar's worth of comfort" in the form of tags telling that the possessor had contributed to the common cause in the war on mosquitoes.

Then the Chicago sanitary district appropriated $25,000 to be added to the community fund in a general drive to exterminate the insects. Methods used in Panama to stamp out the menace of disease-carrying mosquitoes in that formerly infested country, will be employed here. All swampy areas in the country round about are to be dosed with oil, and the insects sought out in their principal haunts.

By a concerted, widespread move on the mosquitoes, those in charge expect that they can readily put an end to such attacks as came last year when vicious little mosquitoes attacked business men in their offices right in the center of the Chicago downtown district.

In fact, the hopes are that mosquitoes can be effectively exterminated for good, and that similar offensives will be under way throughout the country wherever the insects are troublesome.

RAIN, HAIL FAILS TO DAMPEN PICNIC

Junior-Senior Annual Affair Set For Brookside Is Held In 'Cat'

By DUGALD BLUE
Thunderstorms, hail storms, rainstorms and windstorms did not stop the juniors and seniors from holding their scheduled junior-senior picnic yesterday. However, instead of celebrating at Brookside park, as was planned, the enthusiastic upperclassmen changed the place of picnic to the school cafeteria.

Eats, consisting of pop, potato chips, hot dogs and numerous other edibles, were served. The tables in the "cat" being arranged in long rows. For three-quarters of an hour, those hungry juniors and seniors ate ravenously every bit of food which came within their reach. No one went away hungry.

After the eats, the rain having stopped, the fellows went out to the school athletic ground and started a baseball game between the two classes. With the girl element of the picnic as an inspiring audience, both teams battled hard, the juniors finally winning over the mighty seniors.

Big Success
Although the picnic could not be held at Brookside, and the students missed a hearty swim and a lot of other fun at the park, no one grumbled. Every participant rose to the occasion and showed a real sportsmanlike spirit. The picnic nevertheless, turned out to be a notable success.

The tickets were 35 cents, about 500 students participating.

GERMANY PROVES CALM AFTER NOTE

Press Comments In Moderation On Disarmament Clause Of Demands

By S. D. WEYER
For International News Service.
BERLIN, June 6.—German press comment today on the allies' note to Germany demanding further disarmament, showed more moderation and restraint than previous outbursts over much milder demands.

Even the hottest voices of the press were tempered with the realization that Germany must do nothing rash and must not shut the door on negotiations.

This pacific tenor of the press clearly was due to semi-official inspiration. It was understood that the government, including President Hindenburg, was unanimous in the opinion that the most effective answer to be made to this latest disarmament note will be to disarm the armors. This would be done by meeting all demands which it is possible to meet in order to prove to the world Germany's good faith.

On the other hand, it is believed certain that some demands, especially those involving industries, will be rejected with a detailed explanation.

Bitter Disappointment
The government and the press were bitterly disappointed by the absence in the note of a definite date when the Cologne zone will be evacuated. The note re-opens in even the most optimistic German mind gravest doubts of allied intention to evacuate the first zone by January 10.

In the meantime, the note gives no assurance whatever that the Rhineland and the Ruhr will be evacuated August 15. These points will form the most important part of the German answer.

The Deutsche Tageblatt took the viewpoint that the note was dominated by France and that it will place insurmountable obstacles in the path of evacuation. "Anyone who has seen the military control commission work here," it said, "knows the commission will never declare Germany is fully disarmed."

Previously it was reported the number of arrests totaled fourteen.

H. S. Webb Co. to Observe Eighth Birthday With Big Sale

BUILDS BUSINESS WITH CONFIDENCE

Store's Growth Comes From Public Having Faith In Merchandise Policy

The fulfillment of an ideal—the desire to found a business that would inspire the confidence of the buying public—is seen in the celebration this month of the eighth anniversary of the founding of H. S. Webb & Co., dry goods store, at 139 North Brand boulevard.

In order that this occasion may be fittingly celebrated and in keeping with the policy of the store, a value giving sale to start Monday and last through next Saturday has been arranged. Full and complete announcement of the anniversary sale appears elsewhere in today's issue.

Grows With City

The first Webb store was opened in Glendale eight years ago by Harry S. Webb. The location was on South Brand boulevard near Broadway, and since its inception, the business has grown with Glendale.

Mr. Webb selected Glendale as the location of his store only after he had spent a year in making a complete and detailed survey of the entire Pacific coast. He visited every city and town on the Pacific coast between San Diego and Vancouver, studied business activities, industrial possibilities, geographical locations, community aspects and future advancement.

"After I had completed my survey of the Pacific coast at considerable expense, I returned to Glendale," Mr. Webb said, "I could see a city of big buildings, a home for big business, a field for unlimited commercial activities. In short, a big future for Glendale. It's geographical location was all that could be desired. I went back to Chicago but soon returned to Glendale. In the years that I have been here, I have never changed my opinion of Glendale.

Builds Real Business

"When I made up my mind to locate here, I decided to build a real business, a business that would inspire confidence in the buying public by the sale of good merchandise at correct prices. The store was founded on this idea and has enjoyed prosperity since the opening.

"I opened my first store on South Brand boulevard near Broadway. It was near the bank. As the business grew I conceived the idea that there was no men's store in Glendale, so I bought outright the lease to the store adjoining my place of business.

"Thus was opened the first men's store in Glendale. I put in an arch so that the two stores were connected.

Gets New Location

"Then I saw the need of bigger things. Business demanded a bigger store. I began to look for a new location. When I decided upon the site of our present store, people laughed at me. They said the store would be on the edge of the city. My judgment as to location has been vindicated by the growth of the city, for today the store is surrounded by big business.

"When the present store was built I put lots of money into the best fixtures obtainable, mahogany and gumwood. When the store was opened, I dedicated it to the public. I told the people of Glendale this store is your store, you made it possible for me to give you the store Glendale needed by your patronage. Today the store stands, as it did then, as an expression of gratitude to the people of Glendale.

"I had a vision to go beyond, to make the store a monument to the loyalty and confidence of the buying public, exemplifying good business ethics and the highest ideals reflected in commercialism.

Help to Customer

"My idea was to build a store that would reflect the idea of business as a help to the customer, not merely selling goods and wrapping up packages, but to sell service with every article of merchandise, to provide pleasant atmosphere, to create harmony. These things, in my estimation, are the vital factors of business that money can not buy.

"The organization is my partner. The success of the business is in the organization. The secret of building up a great business is seen in a man capable of hiring good people and then throwing around them an atmosphere that will bring out the best in them. In short, the secret of building up any business is organization.

The first Webb store was founded in Glendale by Mr. Webb eight years ago and, therefore, the eighth birthday is to be fittingly celebrated with a big sale that starts next Monday and will last one week. Mr. Webb and his loyal employees have built up a fine business, inspiring public confidence and gaining a large patronage.

STAGE AND SCREEN

VIEWS AND PREVIEWS—NEWS NOTES FROM STUDIOS

'Raffles'

Film built on famous yarns opens tomorrow at Glendale theatre; House Peters takes leading role.

House Peters, who long since established himself on both stage and screen as one of the leading actors in virile, out-of-door man parts, has abandoned this type of character in his latest starring vehicle, "Raffles." Universal picture that opens tomorrow for three days at the Glendale theatre.

It is true that the character does lack virility, but the action of the picture takes place indoors and Peters wears the conventional garb of the English society man, and it is by keenness of mentality rather than by force of his physical powers that he accomplishes his purpose.

"Raffles," the picture, is based on certain of the stories written by E. W. Hornung around his celebrated cracksmen character of the same name, and in part on the stage version written by Eugene W. Presbrey. Hornung's stories have long been considered as classics of their kind and have been read by thousands and thousands of persons.

The characterization by Peters is said to be a very vivid portrayal of the fiction creation of Hornung. Peters has had long experience in England and his familiarity with the English atmosphere of the story had much to do with the production while it was being filmed. King Baggot, the director, also is familiar with English conditions and the combination of knowledge is said to have been very effective.

'Declasse'

In support of Corinne Griffith in the First National picture, "Declasse," which comes tomorrow to the Cosmo theatre, are many popular screen players. Among them are Lloyd Hughes, Hedda Hopper, Rockcliffe Fellowes, Lilyan Tashman, Louise Fazenda, Clive Brook, Joan Standing, Eddie Lyons, Mario Carillo. The direction was in the hands of Robert Vignola. The picture is an adaptation from Ethel Barrymore's stage success of the same title.

"Inez From Hollywood," First National's new picture, presents a veritable galaxy of film celebrities in its cast. Included are Anna Q. Nilsson, Lewis Stone, Antonio Moreno, Wallace Beery, Lloyd Hughes, Ben Lyon and Ford Sterling, not to mention pretty Mary Astor. It shows for the last times today.

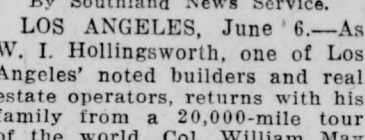

TOM MIX FEATURE OF GATEWAY FILM

Popular Actor Appears In 'Dick Turpin'; Wonder Dog Tomorrow

At the Gateway theatre Tom Mix is playing the leading role in "Dick Turpin" the last times today. This is a thrilling tale of romance and adventure.

The bill for Sunday, Monday and Tuesday features Rin-Tin-Tin, the wonder dog, in "Tracked in the Snow Country" with a notable support including June Marlowe, David Butler, Mitchell Lewis, Charles Selton, Princess Lea and others.

This is a story of the eternal snows of the far north, of strong men and tender women, of an outlawed dog who tracked his enemy to his death.

CLOSES TONIGHT

William J. Flynn's 'Behind The Curtain,' Now At Glendale Theatre

"Behind the Curtain," Universal attraction which closes today at the Glendale theatre, came heralded as a mystery story of unusual conception and unusual solution. It lived up to the advance notices in both instances, and in addition gave pleasure by the manner in which it was acted and in the perfection of its direction by Chester Franklin.

The story from which the picture was adapted was written by William J. Flynn, noted criminologist and former head of the United States secret service bureau.

Vaudeville Program
"Go Into the Kitchen," a farce comedy skit on the vaudeville stage by Walter Fichter and his company, is one of the best one-act comedies that has shown here in a long time. It is the story of the entry of an Egyptian harem girl into an American home where a new cook is expected. Developments are rapid and unexpected. Fletcher, Ivy and Moran in "A Classic In Hokus" have their piece rightly christened. Miss Nada Norrine, who can sing equally well in high soprano or low contralto, specializes in songs that might be classed in the popular category.

INDUSTRIES IRON OUT TRADE CURVE

Manufacturers Have Gone Into Laundry Business, But Don't Know It

By J. C. ROYLE
Special Correspondent of The Glendale Evening News, Copyright, 1925

NEW YORK, June 6.—Scores of manufacturers throughout the country have gone into the laundry business, although they may not know it. At least they are engaged in ironing out the peaks and valleys of the business curve, and wiping out to some extent the economic wastes which confront practically every industrial concern.

Manufacturers and others are finding out that the spurts and stops of business are not necessary. They are eliminating them in some cases by close co-operation between sales and production departments. With established businesses, it has been found that the volume of orders does not vary exceptionally from one year to the next. The fluctuations in sales and shipments at certain times have been caused by seasonal influences or by speculation on the part of middle men and retailers.

When such factors become effective, the manufacturer is compelled at certain times to put on additional employees, work overtime and put all machinery at the peak of production. When the spurt has passed and orders have dropped off, the time machines are curtailed, payrolls are cut down and the plant may have to close entirely for a period. Resumption of work after such curtailment always has been difficult and costly since skilled workers who have sought other employment must be replaced.

In the building trades this situation has been met to a very considerable extent by winter building. The additional 4 to 5 per cent which is expended on protection for work and workers from the weather has been more than equalized by the individual efficiency of the workers, who are anxious to hold their off-season jobs, and by the fact that ample labor is available and bonuses and overtime unnecessary.

In manufacture, some of the corporations' sales departments have been made to estimate the amount of goods they expect to sell in the year and required to stand by their estimates to dispose of that quantity for delivery in a steady flow throughout the twelve-month.

The production side of the business then made only the amount estimated, with each department assigned a definite quota. Thus raw materials were purchased under advantageous conditions for the entire year and only enough carried to meet the quota requirements.

Soap Maker's Policy
William C. Proctor, president of Proctor and Gamble soap manufacturers, says that such a system has made it possible for his company to guarantee to workers at least forty-eight weeks a year, less only time lost by reason of legal holidays, fire, flood or other extreme emergencies at full time pay.

COOLIDGE 'FED UP' PUBLICITY HOUND

Picture Company's Scheme To 'Shoot' President Is Nipped In Bud

By ROBERT T. SMALL
Special Correspondent of The Glendale Evening News, Copyright, 1925

WASHINGTON, June 6.—President Coolidge is just about "fed up" on the various efforts being made from time to time to gain advertising advantage out of the chief executive. Mr. Coolidge has been rather long suffering at that. He has posed for his photograph on many times and with so many people and things that every time he hears a "click" of any sort, he immediately falls in to "attention" and makes a valiant effort to smile and "look pleasant, please."

The crowning effort of the campaign to use the president came of course with the plan to have him present a "dummy" diploma at Annapolis to a distinguished young moving picture hero who was screening a scenario with Annapolis as the "locale."

The actor was to be dressed in regulation midshipman uniform and was to line up with the rest of this year's graduating class. When he stepped forward they were to be "close ups" and all of this was to be for the gain of the actor and his producers rather than for the glory of the United States navy.

Hot Water Complex

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, who appears to have something of a hot water complex, had given his approval to the whole shooting scheme and when photographers came from news reels to take pictures of the president, they were being placed by the secretary's plans, he put his foot down. The presidential foot is not an extremely large one, but it has all of the Coolidge will behind it, and when once down it has more or less of a seven league aspect.

So the big advertising scheme, or screen, was knocked out, and yet not a day passes that the president does not have to confront petty and minor efforts to use him and his high office to further some advertising stunt.

The favorite and most worked plan is that of requesting the president to step outside and pose with some interesting, and perhaps noted caller. There is reason for taking most of the pictures snapped at the White House. Some are of real historic value. Some have their place in the news of the day. They may fade tomorrow, but for the time being they are worth while. That is why a large staff of photographers always is on duty at the White House. They lurk constantly in the offing, and the slightest alarm of "something doing" brings them pell mell to their stations, dragging the old cameras behind them.

Actors are the most frequent of the publicity seekers at the White House. These actors say they must live for their public. Their public would like to read about their visit to the president, but above all, their public would like to see them pictured with the chief executive. Always someone in public life, some congressman, senator or other public official can be found to stand sponsor for the actors in their White House quest. Just within the past few days a certain reel star who specializes in four-gallon hats, and who toured Europe with his trick horse, arrived at the White House, four-gallon hat, but minus the horse. Mr. Coolidge doesn't go in either for reel or real horses—he likes his own tried and trusted electric dobbie.

That's the matter with Harry, methinks, is that he is bored. A week on the beach with some good companions, a month in the mountains with a pack burro and a dog, a year in the farthest corner of the earth, perhaps, would effect a cure.

Modern civilization is just what the dreamers a decade ago had as their ideal. Now that they have it, their dream is shattered, that's all. Time to come the dreamers of today will have their air castles fall and they will become ill and think dire thoughts.

It takes a man like John Steven McGroarty to "dwell among the ruins" of yesterday. With his yellow cat and his flivver and his good wife he toys around with a Spanish renaissance and, according to all reports, his page of hope and humor, his plays and his life, collectively speaking, are not failures in this modern civilization.

Tragedy visited Glendale yesterday. A lineman killed and another man was buried alive in a sewer trench. Death stalks in queer places, atop buildings, below ground. You never know just where, or when, or how.

But we do know why—we are born to die. During one's life, which is altogether too short for the beneficence of earthly things, it should be a constant aim to make this a better place for others to live. Cynics would do well to devote their lives to spreading joy and making people happy. Why, there is no need for vain regrets. Even in failure there is the reward of having done something worth while.

COMMENT by GIL A. COWAN

By golly, it did everything in the way of rain, hail, thunder and lightning yesterday afternoon in several parts of Southern California, just like this writer got through saying it didn't do, eh, Eddie?

Writing about the climate here, or elsewhere, is like reading minds. Sometimes you hit it, most times you don't. Father Ricard, looking at the sun spots, gets a lot of advance dope the weather bureau doesn't believe. And when he's wrong, they chortle. And when they're wrong, the rest of us get wet.

Then the sun smiles on us and shows some more spots which mean something desperate by way of drought, tornadoes and so on. But not any lack of rainfall here this year, although we might have had more—and may get it yet.

It is an old adage, "Variety is the spice of life."

Speaking of variety, you'd be shocked to know the women calling The Glendale Evening News office last night for information regarding the winner of the Gibson-Turney fight in New York. Maybe their lady daddies had 'em call, who knows? But call they did!

And the knockout in the twelfth round had hardly been counted by the referee when The Glendale Evening News was announcing the result, flashed by leased wire across the country.

Great boxing shows are being held here on the coast. Under the eagle eye of a state commission the fights are being kept clean—so far. Just how long it will last is a question. That depends upon promoters.

Even the makers of "apple sauce" recently have been endeavoring to get the president to give their product a written or spoken recommendation. All politicians are supposed to know something of the gentle art of apple sauce, but Mr. Coolidge's friends insist he deals in the stuff as little as any occupant of the White House ever does. Therefore, Mr. Coolidge has declined to endorse any one brand.

All presidents have been subjected to this same ordeal of advertising and self-seeking fire. At the present time, however, the game seems to be at its height. It threatened to engulf Mr. Coolidge. Now his foot is down, and the White House threshold may be kept clear in the future.

The round trip rate is the same to all whether they go on the special train or in advance of the train.

GOOD OUTLOOK IN NATION'S BUSINESS

Expert, In Second Dispatch To Evening News, Sees Further Prosperity

This is the second of series of dispatches outlining conditions in the basic industries which will give a basis on which business men can form a conclusion as to which way the cat of business will jump in next few months.

By J. C. ROYLE
Special Correspondent of The Glendale Evening News, Copyright, 1925.

NEW YORK, June 6.—No serious check has been suffered in the construction program of the country. The contracts let during the first five months of this year are at least 7 per cent higher than for any previous year in history. This does not mean permits granted. Projects for which permission has been obtained may be delayed indefinitely. It means that contracts have actually been let for well over $2,000,000,000 worth of work so far this year. Taking into account the work not done on contract, there seems every possibility that the momentum already gained will carry 1925 through to a total for construction work of at least $5,000,000,000.

The bearing of these facts on business in general is readily seen. Building trade workmen are the highest paid laborers in the world. Their wages comprise no small part of the public buying power. The building industry consumes raw and manufactured materials in scores of lines and has a tremendous influence on business as a whole.

In the next few months, it is very possible, owing to the seasonal nature of the industry, that the volume of new contracts will fall off. The back-log of accrued construction shortage is growing smaller all the time, and New York and some other large centers have shown marked building activity in certain periods of this year compared with 1924. None the less, the total volume for the present twelve months seems destined to exceed that of last year.

Outlook for Prices
Building materials have declined in price somewhat, but the assurance of building activity for the remainder of the year seems likely to keep the levels fairly stable. Wages are high, but building labor is becoming much more efficient, and contractors have been relieved of much of the burden of overtime and bonus payments.

The lumber bill of the country for the year seems likely to exceed $1,500,000,000. Production of lumber is about 14 per cent ahead of that of a year ago, but, although there has been a slight amount of overproduction, this is now being corrected. Latest figures from the Pacific coast show production well under new business. The adopting of lumber standards and the custom of grade marking lumber adopted by the Southern Pine association have materially aided the industry. Prices are lower than in 1924.

Cement Sets Record
Cement has been produced at the record rate of over 50,000,000 in the last five months and has been steady in price. Owing to the increase in plant capacity output is not at or near the maximum. No large stocks are being piled up. Glass plants are working at full speed. Hardware demand is fair and paint companies report a most prosperous condition, which, however, is due to consumption in other industries as well as building.

The steel industry is in fairly satisfactory case. Prices seem to have stabilized, and so does production. There are weak spots in the steel situation. Production has been extremely high up to the last few weeks. Curtailment to about 70 per cent of capacity has brought output closer to consumption and the orders are beginning to increase. This is especially true in the west.

Metal Market
At the beginning of May the orders of the United States Steel corporation showed a decided falling off, but profits for the second quarter for the industry, as a whole, are expected to be fair. Automobile manufacture and the building industry have aided steel makers materially and for the time being the outlook is optimistic. Tinplate demand is heavy.

Copper has been benefited by the holding down of production. Lead is active and strong and in a firm technical position. Zinc is in fair demand. Advances which would lead to additional production of copper and zinc would probably serve to upset the equilibrium now maintained.

By use of his newly invented incubator, Llewellyn R. Atkinson, a British electrical engineer, says that nearly as many chickens will be produced from each dozen of eggs as by hen.

Bridle Paths Hold Untold Beauties

Harry W. Ellison, manager of the Oakmont Country club, greeting Miss Brunner, prominent horsewoman, at the doorway of the Oakmont Country club as she returned recently from a trip over the bridge trails in the Verdugo Hills, most of which have now been completed. Miss Brunner will ride in the Flintridge horse show to be held on June 13, over the bridge paths of the Oakmont Country club estates. The trails join with those completed by the late L. C. Brand, and then extend on into Burbank. Deep in the hills there are waterfalls and other scenic beauties little realized today, Miss Brunner says.

Chevy Chase Promoter Reports Estates Sold

Several large estates in Chevy Chase have been acquired within the last few days according to Bert Farrar, owner and developer of this tract, who states that the average size of four of the most important of these sales have averaged approximately one and one-half acres each.

The largest estate has been purchased by A. T. Jurgins, prominent oil operator of Long Beach. It has a frontage of 300 feet on Highland drive and overlooks a panoramic view of rolling hills and the city of Glendale that is matchless in its beauty. This property will be landscaped at once it is stated and with the home that is to be constructed here the total investment will exceed $200,000.

Another tract at the Glendale entrance to Chevy Chase has just been secured by Dr. J. K. Gilkerson of Glendale. This tract will also receive extensive beautification in addition to the heavy growth of oak trees that now dot the property.

H. D. Woodill of Woodill & Hulse Electric Co. has purchased over an acre fronting on Chevy Chase drive. Mr. Woodill is an authority on landscape art and will create a beauty spot of unusual appeal on this site because of the great natural beauty of the area in which it is located. The fourth of the large holdings is the site of the new home for Bert Farrar, designed by Franz Herding and now starting to be built.

In addition to those four estates three splendid new homes are now being planned by Lloyd Wright, noted Los Angeles architect for Mrs. Florence E. Henna, Philip Townsend Hanna and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Derby, all of Los Angeles.

Capital Realtors Urge More Beautiful Homes

The Sacramento Real Estate board at its regular meeting discussed methods for securing homes of more architectural beauty in Sacramento. No policy was determined upon along this line but the opinion of the board was to the effect that many homes now being built in Sacramento could be made more attractive and be of greater value if more attention were paid to correct designing and architectural lines.

GERMANY'S POLICE

LONDON, June 6.—Germany's police strength is 20 per cent over the amount authorized by the Versailles treaty, according to the terms of the council of ambassadors' note to Germany. The note was published here today demanding reduction of the police strength and dissolution of its military character.

Visalia Invites Realty Delegates to See City

The Visalia Realty board, the Visalia Chamber of Commerce, and the Visalia papers, have joined in an invitation to the caravan of realty delegates to motor via Visalia, when they advance on Fresno on October 6 for the four-day convention. The invitation is the first to be received at the state offices, and will be brought to the attention of the convention committee.

Producing foodstuffs occupies the greatest number of factories in Brazil, while clothing is next, wood-working, furniture and textiles following in order.

On June 13 participants in the Flintridge horse show will ride over the Oakmont Country Club estate trails in a contest for horsemanship honors.

Santa Cruz Realtors Doom 'For Sale' Sign

The Santa Cruz Realty board has adopted a resolution to eradicate all "For Sale" signs from their listed property and to educate the public from their use. This action is in line with the same movement generally throughout California. A firm in San Jose, according to a statement made by Marcus Blanchard of that city, refuses to make loans on houses carrying the "For Sale" signs. Those opposed to their use consider signs as not only detrimental to the beauty of the city but as presenting the wrong psychology to the prospective purchaser.

The Santa Cruz board has established the multiple listing system among its membership, and has formed a real estate class of eighteen members through the University of Southern California under the auspices of the California Real Estate association, as well as having formed a 100 per cent three-way membership in the local, state and national associations. A city planning committee of members has been appointed and is working with the City Council in drafting a new zoning ordinance.

Fresno Plans City Sign To Advertise 'Realtor'

President Ned M. Hartman of the San Joaquin Valley Realtors' association, announces that the Fresno realtors are planning to put two large signs on two of the main highway entrances to Fresno for the purpose of advertising the word "Realtor." This has been done in several towns throughout the United States.

Head of State Farm Lands Sees Prosperity

"Cattle conditions throughout the state are excellent," J. Bradley Clayton, of San Jose, chairman of the farm lands committee of the California Real Estate association declared in a statement reviewing conditions as of May 30. "On the whole, outside of the hay being somewhat damaged by rain, the farming conditions in California are high-class and I predict that California farmers cannot help having a very fine year."

L. A. BUILDING CLIMBS INTO NEW MARK

Permits For Month Of May Set New Record; All Of Southland Increases

LOS ANGELES—Building permits for May have established a new record in reaching the high figure of $16,602,502, a total gain of $7,812,570 over May of 1924, and a gain of $2,104,471 over April last, according to statistics compiled by the Southern California Chapter, Associated General Contractors of America from reports of the building department.

Nineteen thousand, two hundred building permits with a total valuation of $67,869,941 have been issued since the first of the year, compared with 24,361 permits with a valuation of 68,536,196 for the corresponding period of last year. This shows a decrease of only $666,251 under the same period of last year, while on May 1, the decrease was placed at $8,478,825—a gain during the month of $7,812,570.

This places construction valuations at a new high mark, creating a record that surpasses figures for any one month since March, 1924. The valuation for May was greater than the total for the entire year of 1915, 1916, 1917 or 1918.

The increase in construction activities for May was not confined to Los Angeles, alone. Entire Southern California enjoyed a substantial increase in building as shown by the reports from the various towns.

General In Southland
The remarkable increase throughout the southern part of the state is primarily due to the fact that construction has been on a firm basis and the class of structures have been more substantial.

Last year small dwelling houses constituted the majority of the construction, while this year the activity has been more or less confined to commercial buildings and residences costing upward of $16,000. This is especially true in the small towns of the south.

CONGRATULATIONS

WASHINGTON, June 6.—President Coolidge has cabled his congratulations to King George V of England, on the occasion of his birthday.

"I take sincere pleasure in extending to your majesty cordial birthday greetings," the president cabled. "I trust that your majesty's health has been completely restored and that the coming years may hold health and happiness for you."

GOLDEN STATE NOW FIFTH IN EXPORT

California Closely Follows Illinois In Shipments During Past Year

SAN FRANCISCO, June 6.—California is the fifth state in the matter of export for the year 1924, according to figures just issued by the Department of Commerce, with a total of $234,684,210 for merchandise shipped. The Golden State closely follows Illinois with $238,314,270 export total in the fourth place. Total exports of all states for the year amounted to $4,498,151,936.

Totaling more than half of the state's exports for the year, mineral oils and fruits, valued at $88,519,888 and $54,208,400 respectively, bore the brunt of the struggle for supremacy in foreign markets, and assisted in obtaining the margin of $11,000,000, which California secured over New Jersey. Other commodities which helped materially in maintaining California's lead are barley, grain, valued at $10,504,375; manufactured cotton, $8,745,326; canned fish, $7,273,628; machinery, except agricultural, $5,082,197; chemicals and allied products, $4,950,234; boards, planks and scantlings, $430,615 and agricultural machinery, $818,551.

Great Export Trade

Eleven states showed an export trade amounting to over $100,000,000 for the year. They were Texas, with figures of $737,218,927; New York, $731,593,502; Pennsylvania, $293,299,153; Illinois, $239,314,270; California, $234,684,210; New Jersey, $223,921,264; Louisiana, $222,827,224; Michigan, $177,876,854; Virginia, $150,198,225; Ohio, $133,559,362; and Massachusetts, with merchandise valuations of $114,418,430. Minnesota, with shipments valued at $99,880,490, was just outside the first eleven, while Nevada, with exports amounting to but $223,413, brought up the rear of the entire list.

This is the first time in the history of government trade statistics, according to Dr. Julius Klein, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, that an attempt has been made to show the relative yearly standing of the different states in the never-ending struggle for foreign trade.

Foreign trade exports from other Pacific coast states for the year are as follows: Washington, $93,940,096; Oregon, $70,503,939, and Arizona, $9,198,505.

Improved ventilation in factories in Bengal, India, has lessened the spirit of discontent among the workers that was recently manifested.

Lumber Hustler For Bentley Lumber Company Tells Of Experience

Spirited away by the hand of hooded night, no one has known for weeks the whereabouts of the missing Bentley Lumber Co. employee, Bill Ding.

I was standing in front of the Plan Service department one evening after dark," explained Bill,
"and was engaged in conversation with a fellow, and while my attention was thus engaged, I was struck a tremendous blow from the rear. My next recollection was bumpety bump, clikety clack, I was moving box car.

Two colored companions accompanied me, and from all appearances were lumber handlers from some big lumber port. Every now and then they would turn me over, discussing my appearance, apparent quality, etc. and likewise contrasting me to the Oregon Pine that they had been handling all their lives.

"Boy," said the first, "what you say dey calls dishere hunk of wooden humanity?"

"De boss say dey calls it 'Fir!'"

So the first one rubbed his hand over my smooth surface as he attempted to raise me up for examination.

"Why you reckon dey calls it
'Fir?'" he asked, much puzzled.

"Ah knows why," said the second.

"Why den?" he wanted to know.

"Cause it comes from FUR off," replied the other triumphantly.

And then I began to realize the old darkey was more near right than wrong, for I was at that time, a long, long way from Glendale.

I soon lapsed into unconsciousness again and the next thing I knew I was in a hospital. Some one was bracing me up, and nailing me together, and bandaging my damaged parts. This aided by a little coloring matter on my lips and eyebrows, placed me in fairly presentable condition to tell folks where I hailed from.

So after I was able to leave the horse pit I was placed on the cars again, and soon I was safe in Glendale, where I'm on the job again selling houses, pergolas, children's swings, etc., for Bentley Lumber Co. Evenings this week I'm always at the Eagle Rock Merchants' exposition.

Don't forget to stop and say housy.

Unusually Artistic Small House

Small House Service Plan

"The above plan was designed by P. D. De Longchamp for the Small House Plan Service which is located in the Metropolitan Building Material Exhibit, Broadway at Fifth, Los Angeles. Working drawings and specifications for this and other designs may be secured there."

"This small house is made attractive by using common brick walls to which it so pleasantly adapts itself. Its long low rustic roof line breaking down through the windows of the living room forming small gables of half timbered design. The front entrance door opens into a brick or tiled floor vestibule which is separated by an arched opening to the stair hall."

dena and other neighboring cities.
Besides the regular line of merchandise, a specialty is made of blasting-supplies, such as dynamite, black powder, fuse, caps, etc.
This concern is said to be the only establishment in the valley buying blasting-supplies in car load lots.

Other lines handled are, Yale builders hardware, Bradley's Paints, Maytag washers and Wedgewood gas ranges. Don Webb states that he maintains a free information bureau for the benefit of fishermen, giving advice about where to fish and what kind of tackle to use. A very complete line of fishing tackle is carried in stock.

Q—Is it all right to use two-inch by eight-inch southern pine for first floor joists that span twelve feet?

A—No! Use two by ten joists.
This is cheaper construction in the long run.

Q—The tin roof on my house has been in place for ten years, but it is now in such a condition that the roofer advises removing it. He says it will not be visible to replace this with tin, for tin as manufactured now is not as good as it was thirty years ago. What is your opinion of this?

A—Manufacturers of tin roofing have perfected the processes of manufacture, both as to the iron base and the application of the tin coating. This product is superior, if anything, to the article put on the roofs thirty years ago.
Use guaranteed tin made by a reputable manufacturer. The results will be satisfactory.

Q—Our house was built in 1913. When water from the dormers drops onto the roof it leaks through and spoils the paper on the ceiling inside.
This has been going on for some time. The shingles look good but seem to soak through in many places. I wonder if there is some preparation we can use to stop the leaks and thus avoid the expense of reshingling.

A—It is probably time to re-shingle. Eleven years do not represent a reasonable length of life for a good shingle roof, but we deduce from your letter that the shingles were not creosoted or

Building Hints for Home Buyer

Good Construction Makes First Cost the Final Cost

IN the building or purchase of a home every dollar spent should be expended with the thought of making, so far as possible, the first cost the last cost. Expenditure with that thought in mind is wise spending and in the end it invariably proves to be economical spending.

The average home builder or home buyer builds or buys but once in a lifetime. And, unless he obtains good construction through the use of good materials, the cost of his home does not stop with the purchase price. The cost becomes a continuing one just so long as there are short-lived materials in the building to be renovated or replaced.

As to types of houses, it is a matter of preference with each individual home owner. There has been a return to the good architectural types that prevailed in the Colonial era. In some cases the location and size of the prospective home-owner's lot will determine, in a measure, the type of house best suited. The accompanying illustrations indicate various designs of houses such as Dutch Colonial, New England Colonial, bungalow, etc., that are in favor with home builders.

The point to be remembered in building is that the purchaser will get only what he pays for. If the price he agrees to pay permits merely the use of short-lived materials, in due time repairs and replacements are inevitable. Good architects and builders will point out that a reasonably larger first cost, lasting materials are obtainable and later trouble and repair expense can be avoided.

The builder or architect will no doubt inquire whether he shall use copper roofing, or at least copper roof "flashing," and copper downspouts and gutters because of their non-rusting qualities and elimination of replacement expense. The plumber will suggest brass pipe to any inquiring about a plumbing system that will save the familiar trouble with rust-clogged water pipes. These are some of the lasting materials that architects and builders bring to the attention of home-builders who set out to make first cost the final cost.

Sheet Metal Work Is Important In Building

That the quality of a sheet metal job or heating job remains as a tribute to the integrity and sound workmanship of the contractor long after the price is forgotten is the contention of Jack Watson, general manager of the Co-operative Sheet Metal Works, rear 111 South Orange street. "We number among our accounts a big majority of the biggest and best general contractors in Glendale, and the only reason is that we are reliable, give the best of service and absolutely stand back of every job we do," he said. Price is sometimes the first consideration with some people, it is pointed out, but the quality of workmanship is what counts in the long run.

Beautiful Glendale Heights Home—For Sale By Owners

$6,750.00

Down Payment $1250.00

Located at 1118 Berkeley Drive, Glendale Heights, this attractive home commands a delightful view of the city, valley and mountains. The lot is full size—large front yard and fair size rear yard.

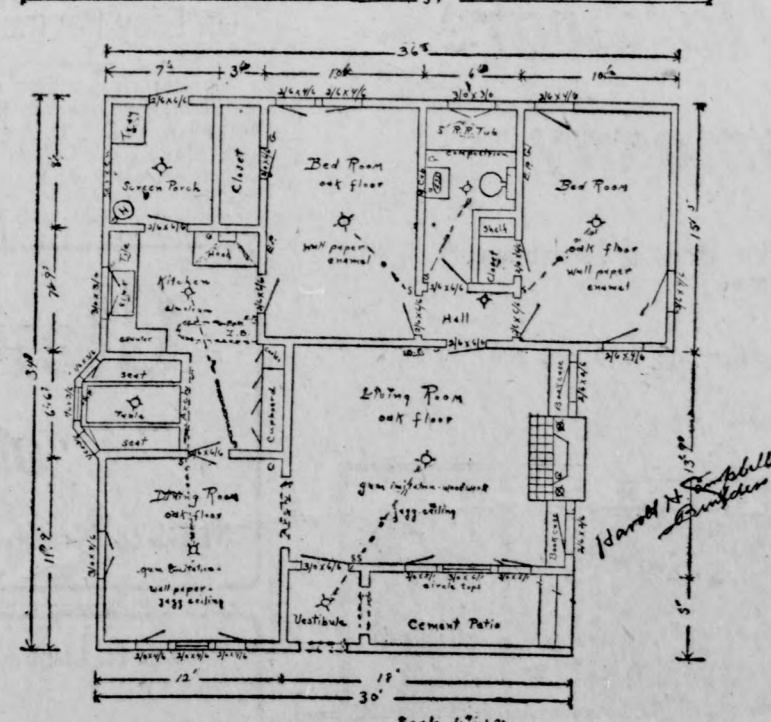

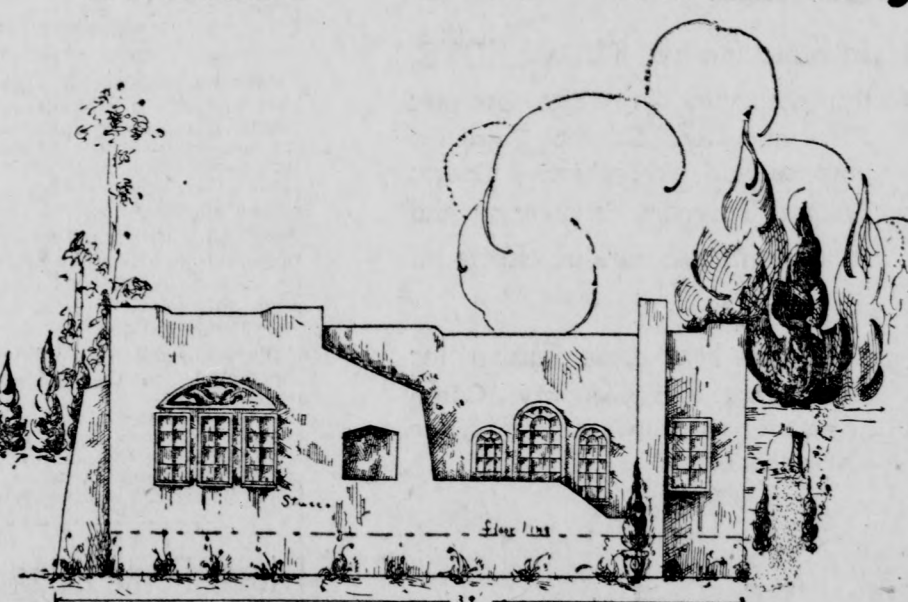

This house is sturdily constructed—good materials and first class workmanship were used throughout. The foundation is set level and into solid ground.

There is a strongly built cobbles-stone retaining wall.

Oak floors are used throughout, Tiffany blend on walls, real fireplace, shower, tile sink, automatic heater; stone-tile stucco garage.

The idea in building this house was to build a "home," one that would be a source of pride and delight to the possessor. Nothing has been left out to make this in every sense the "Home of Your Dreams."

After having seen this home we think you will agree with us that it is one of the best buys in Glendale today.

For the amount of money invested, it is hard to get a more beautiful, convenient home with the room that is in this one. That building and rooms are nearly square, which greatly reduces the cost of irregular shaped houses. It has all the built-in conveniences. The mantel extends across the entire end of the living room with the bookcase and writing desk built in at each side of the fireplace. If it is desired to eliminate the breakfast nook, this space can be built into the screen porch, and then have room for two laundry trays and a washer. HOME BUILDING
ORGANIZATION

New Personnel In Charge Of Local Office Of Pacific
Ready-Cut Co.

A new homebuilding organization has entered Glendale planning to take charge of the sales and service of the Pacific Ready-Cut Homes. Eli W. Gregg Co. of Pasadena, which organization has handled the construction of Pacific homes in the Crown City for two years has been awarded the Glendale territory succeeding T. R. Robertshaw who will hereafter confine his activities to Huntington Park. Offices have been taken by the Glendale organization at 215 1/2 West Colorado street where will be maintained a complete service division and will be kept on file several hundred of the new plans of homes ranging in construction cost from a few hundred dollars to $10,000.

It is the plan of the organization to create special designs for homebuilders who desire that their homes be designed to meet their particular needs. There is said to be more than 25,000 homes constructed by the Pacific system and the present production is approximately 4000 houses per year. At least 500 houses in and around Glendale have been constructed by Pacific Ready-Cut materials and a complete list of these homes is being prepared by the local builders so that reference can be made to any of the houses and prospective homebuilders can inspect at first hand the quality of the construction.

Eli W. Gregg, president of the company, states that there is every indication that higher lumber prices will prevail during the early fall season and the prices of materials at the present time are lower than they have been for five and one-half years. With home building costs at the lowest point they will reach and with the expectation of higher prices within a few weeks he believes that this will prove a good stimulant for home builders to place their orders as early as possible and be protected on the present low price basis.

Callers at the Glendale office of Pacific Homes are being presented with free copies of plan pamphlets showing many of the most popular designs of homes.

Diet and Health

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

LOST 102 POUNDS, BUT—
"Dear Doctor: I am writing for a little help. About two and one-half years ago, I weighed 267½, and after following your book carefully, I lost 102 pounds in a year's time. I stayed at 165½ for about four months. Then I went to a farm for the summer and now I am back to 139.
"I started in earnest to reduce again last Monday morning, and hope to lose more than 60 pounds during the year. I am very small-boned and I suppose I should weigh about 138, but when I get down to 165, I look sick enough to die! Of course with all this excess weight I lose easily but I get so pale and pinched looking that every one talks and discourages me about dieting. Will you tell me what I can do to keep some color without resorting to the dye pot?
"I have never been able to find a maintenance diet. I either gain or lose. If I get down to normal weight and stayed there a little while, would I get back my color and look better?"—Mrs. M."

One hundred and two pounds less! I think that is two pounds more than we have any record of. Too bad you got some of it back. It is not unusual at all, Mrs. M., to look pale and drawn while reducing. You have just got to resort to the "dye pot" for a while. Don't hesitate! Or else keep up your morale and tell your friends to go some place. When you get down to normal and can go on your maintenance diet, you will find you will look all right. I promise you. But don't lose more than one to one and one-half pounds a week.

Where such a great loss is to be hoped for, you should have the following foundation diet each day:
At least a half pound of the leafy vegetables (greens of any sort, a large share of them raw), and a half-pound of other vegetables, or fruit; a pint of skim or buttermilk, or three ounces or so of cottage cheese; two medium potatoes OR two slices of whole wheat bread; three or four ounces of lean meat OR fish OR two or three eggs. You see, you must have your protein, vitamins and mineral elements, or you will lose

TAKING THINGS EASILY

The trouble with more than half the young girls who are complaining of premature gray hair and early wrinkles is that they never learn to take things easily. The girl who gets up early and does a full eight hours in an office or shop, then rushes home to spend another five or six in recreation is giving out more energy during her waking hours than she can make up while she is sleeping. In the old days they said that a fair division of life was eight hours play, eight hours work and eight hours sleep. The unfortunate part of modern life is that the going to work and returning and the crowded luncheon hour all come out of the playtime without being in the least enjoyable. If we have to earn our way we can not take from our working hours, so we must take from our recreation and rest.

Long ago Arnold Bennett wrote a book called "How to Live on Twenty-Four Hours a Day," which still contains a lot of useful advice. Its general message is: make use of the waste moments. When you read books read improving ones, study your newspaper well so you'll know what's going on in the world. Listen to good music and go to see good plays in preference to trashy ones.

Above all—this is my advice—plan your day so that brief periods of rest come into your working time. If you can lie down 15 or 20 minutes during your luncheon period, by all means do so. If you have even half an hour between your return from work and your dinner have a hot bath and

Morning Wedding

The wedding of Miss Jean Corbet of 345 Kibbey street, Los Angeles, and Edwin J. Brehme, of 806 South Maryland avenue was solemnized at nuptial mass this morning, Saturday, June 6, 1923, at 8:30 o'clock, at Holy Family Catholic church. Father M. Galvin performed the ceremony. Pink and white carnations and spring flowers were used in artistic arrangement for decorations. The pews were decorated with flowers and white tulle. Music was furnished by Ed O'Leary, who sang "I Love You Truly"; O. M. Phelan sang "Oh, Promise Me," and Mrs. Selegue sang "Ave Maria." Mrs. Lunnenschloss, church organist, played the wedding march as the bridal party entered the church.

Miss Corbet was given in marriage by her stepfather, H. D. Loper. She wore an orchid georgette ensemble suit, with orchid picture hat to match. She carried a prayer book bouquet made of bridal roses, and lilies-of-the-valley and tied with orchid tulle.

She was gowned in embroidered peach georgette and wore a picture hat. Both attendants carried Colonial bouquets of butterfly roses and sweetpeas. Francis Brehme, brother of Mr. Brehme, served as best man. Ushers were: Ernest Rothe of Los Angeles, Jack White and Herman Penner, both of Glendale.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast for relatives and members of the bridal party was served at the Egyptian Village. Mr. and Mrs. Brehme left later for an automobile trip to Yosemite and San Francisco to be gone for two weeks. On their return to Glendale they will be at home to their friends at their new Spanish stucco home, just completed, on Grover avenue.

NATIONAL RADIO MEETING PLANNED

Conference to Be Held Next Fall in Washington, Officials Announce

By ROBERT MACK

Special Correspondent of The Glendale Evening News, Copyright, 1923. WASHINGTON, June 6.—The fourth national radio conference will be held in Washington probably late in September, it was said at the department of commerce. Officials of the radio section are planning for a conference much larger in size and in scope of discussion than any of the three previous meetings.

The first National radio conference held in 1922 was comfortably seated in a room fifteen by eighteen feet. The discussion and business were quickly concluded. In 1923 broadcasting had grown to present a real and growing problem and the delegates numbered three times the membership of the first meeting. Last fall when the third conference was called to order in the largest committee room of the department building, it was discovered that the space in the room was much too small to accommodate the meeting.

This year the number of persons interested in the conference is expected to have increased in geometrical progression to a point where arrangements for the assembly will require one of the largest auditoriums in Washington. Probably a full week of discussion will be needed to get the delegates and the department into agreement on the policies of broadcasting and radio in general for the coming year.

Experts Expected

Besides representatives of nearly all the broadcasting stations now in operation, spokesmen for the one hundred and fifty-odd applicants for wave length are expected to attend the meeting. There will also be representatives of the radio industry, of the radio amateurs and the several branches of the government directly and indirectly interested in wireless transmission.

Secretary Hoover, the godfather of radio in the United States, will preside over the conference as in the past. The announcement of the department of commerce relative to the holding of the conference this fall will set at rest fears of the National Association of Broadcasters, which organization in a circular just mailed to all its members, intimated that the meeting might not be held, and expressed fears that the failure to get together on the problems now and that nothing but a depression of the tracks would be countenanced.

The meeting last night was called expressly for discussion of a temporary Broadway bridge. Meeting with the West Broadway Improvement association were Chairman Rowley, George L. Kaeding and E. L. Osborn, Jr., representing the highways and bridges committee of the Chamber of Commerce; Chairman Watson, of the planning commission, and a number of interested property owners.

The possibility of saving part of the present pavement when Broadway is widened and repaved, thus lowering the cost of the work, will be taken up with the city engineering department. An effort to get the Pacific Electric to reroute Bus No. 1 which now turns south on Pacific avenue from Broadway, so that it will continue along Broadway as far as San Fernando road, will be made.

confronting the broadcasters might be followed by a chaotic broadcasting situation next winter.

In talking to housewives, I find that many of them do not understand the correct use of their refrigerators.

Nor do they understand the science of the refrigerator, that when the ice is placed in the ice chamber it begins to melt by absorbing the heat from the surrounding air in the refrigerator; and this air, becoming colder and therefore heavier, settles to the lower part of the refrigerator, while the warmer air rises, gives up heat by coming in contact with the ice, and in turn becomes chilled and sinks to the bottom. These air currents come in contact with the food, absorb heat from the food, and so cool it. To get free play to this continuous rapid circulation of cooled air, the housekeeper should see that all spaces for the passage of air from the ice chamber should be kept open. And, above all, she must not wrap the ice in paper or cloth; for such a covering retards the circulation of air and insulates the ice from the rest of the refrigerator—thus making it practically useless!

When this principle of air-circulation is understood, we begin to realize that each article placed in a refrigerator contains a definite amount of heat, and will melt a definite amount of ice. For this reason we melt our ice to no purpose when we put fruits and vegetables into the refrigerator which we know that they shall want to take out again in a very short time to prepare for a meal. And, again, we are wasting perfectly good ice when we use it to chill such things as thick paper wrappings on a parcel from the market or when we slip the carrots into the refrigerator without first cutting off their useless tops, or a large head of lettuce bearing coarse outer leaves which we later throw away. Why use our ice to chill carrot-tops, and inedible lettuce outer leaves?

The main object in using a refrigerator, of course, is to save food, not ice, but at the same time we need not use our ice thoughtlessly. The best economy consists in having a refrigerator with well-insulated walls, and in putting into it only clean ice, clean food and clean food-containers. Wipe up spilled foods immediately. Keep the ice chamber, drain-pipe and trap free from slime by washing occasionally with hot water and washing soda, then rinsing with cold water. But it is of little use to try to "sterilize" a refrigerator; sealing for the heat cannot be applied for a long enough period to effect real sterilization. Greater safety results from the daily practice of neatness.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Kirkman in care of the "Efficient Housekeeping" department will be answered in these columns in the time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question. Be sure to use YOUR full name, street number, and the name of your city and state.—The Editor.

The HOUSE of the ARROW

A SERIAL STORY WRITTEN BY A. E. W. MASON
Protected by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate

"We need Monsieur the Commissaire, and Monsieur the Commissaire will not be in a good humor if we disturb him now. For it is 12 o'clock, the sacred hour of luncheon. You will have observed upon the stage that commissaires of police are never in a good humor. It is because—" But Hanaud's audience was never to hear his explanation of this well-known fact. For he stopped with a queer jerk of his voice, his watch still dangling from his fingers upon its chain. Both Jim and Betty looked at once where he was looking. They saw Ann Upcott standing up against the wall with her hand upon the top rail of a chair to prevent herself from falling. Her eyes were closed, her whole face a mask of misery. Hanaud was at her side in a moment.

"Mademoiselle," he asked with a breathless sort of eagerness, "what is it you have to tell me?" "It is true, then?" she whispered. "Jean Cladel exists?"

"Yes."

"And the poison arrow could have been used?" she faltered, and the next words would not be spoken, but were spoken at the last. "And death would have followed in fifteen minutes?"

"Upon my oath it is true," Hanaud insisted. "What is it you have to tell me?"

"That I could have hindered it all. I shall never forgive myself. I could have hindered the murder."

Hanaud's eyes narrowed as he watched the girl. Was he disappointed, Frohisher wondered? Did he expect quite another reply? A swift movement by Betty distracted him from these questions. He saw Betty looking across the room at them with the strangest glittering eyes he had ever seen. And then Ann Upcott drew herself away from Hanaud and stood up against the wall at her full height with her arms outstretched. She seemed to be setting herself apart as a pariah; her whole attitude and posture cried, "Stone me! I am waiting."

Hanaud put his watch into his pocket.

"Mademoiselle, we will let the commissaire eat his luncheon in peace, and we will hear your story first. But not here. In the garden under the shade of the trees." He took his handkerchief and wiped his forehead. "Indeed I too feel the heat. This room is as hot as an oven."

When Jim Frohisher looked back in after time upon the incidents of that morning, nothing stood out so vividly in his memories, no, not even the book of arrows and its plates, not Hanaud's statement of his creed, as the picture of him twirling his watch at the end of his chain, while it sparkled in the sunlight, and he wondered whether he should break in now upon the commissaire of police or let him eat his luncheon in quiet. So much that was unsuspected by them all, hung upon the exact sequence of events.

CHAPTER NINE

THE SECRET

The garden chairs were already set out upon a lawn towards the farther end of the garden in the shadow of the great trees. Hanaud led the way towards them.

"We shall be in the cool here and with no one to overhear us but the birds," he said, and he patted and arranged the cushions in a deep arm-chair of basket work for Ann Upcott. Jim Frohisher was reminded again of the solicitude of a doctor with an invalid and again the parallel jarred upon him. But he was getting a clearer insight into the character of this implacable being. The little courtesies and attentions were not assumed. They were natural, but they would not hinder him for a moment in his pursuit. He would arrange the cushions with the swift deft hands of a nurse—yes, but he would slip the handcuffs on the wrists of his invalid, a moment afterwards, no less deftly and swiftly, if thus his duty prompted him.

"There!" he said. "Now, Mademoiselle, you are comfortable. For me, if I am permitted, I shall smoke."

He turned round to ask for permission of Betty, who, with Jim, had followed into the garden behind him.

"Of course," she answered; and coming forward, she sat down in another of the chairs.

Hanaud pulled out of a pocket a bright blue bundle of thin black cigarettes and lit one. Then he sat in a chair close to the two girls. Jim Frohisher stood behind Hanaud. The lawn was dappled with sunlight and cool shadows. The blackbird and the thrush were calling from bough to bough, the garden was riotous with roses and the air sweet with their perfume. It was a strange setting for the eerie story which Ann Upcott had to tell of her adventures in the darkness and silence of a night; but the very contrast seemed to make the story still more vivid.

"I did not go to Monsieur de Pouillac's ball on the night of April 27," she began, and Jim started, so that Hanaud raised his hand to prevent him interrupting. He had not given a thought to where Ann Upcott had been upon that night. To Hanaud, however, the statement brought no surprise.

"You were not well?" he asked.

"It wasn't that," Ann replied. "But Betty and I had—I won't say a rule, but a sort of working arrangement which I think had been in practice ever since I came to the Maison Grenelle. We didn't encroach upon each other's independence."

The two girls had recognized from their first coming together that privacy was the very salt of companionship. Each had a sanctuary in her own sitting-room. "I don't think Betty has ever been in mine, I only once or twice in hers," said Ann. "We had each our own friends. We didn't pester each other with questions as to where we had been and with whom. In a word, we weren't all the time shadows upon each other's heels."

"A wise rule, Mademoiselle," Hanaud agreed cordially. "A good many households are split from roof to cellar by the absence of just such a rule. The de Pouillacs then were Mademoiselle Betty's friends?"

"Yes. As soon as Betty had gone," Ann resumed, "I told Gaston that he might turn off the lights and go to bed whenever he liked; and I went upstairs to my own sitting-room, which is next to my bedroom. You can see the windows from here. There!"

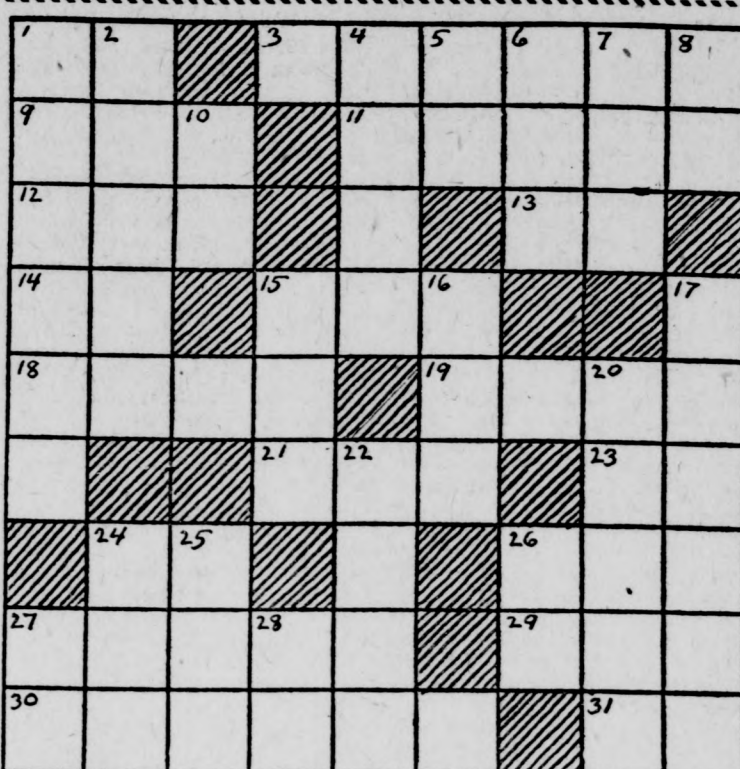

They were in a group facing the back of the long house across the garden. To the right of the hall stretched the line of shuttered windows, with Betty's bedroom just above. Ann pointed to the wing on the left of the hall and towards the road.

"I see. You are above the library, Mademoiselle," said Hanaud.

"Yes. I had a letter to write,"

Ann continued, and suddenly altered. She had come upon some obstacle in the telling of her story which she had forgotten when she had uttered her cry in the library. She gasped. "Oh!" she murmured, and again "Oh!" in a low voice. She glanced anxiously at Betty, but she got no help from her at all. Betty was leaning forward with her elbows upon her knees and her eyes on the grass at her feet and apparently miles away in thought.

"Yes, Mademoiselle," Hanaud asked smoothly.

"It was an important letter," Ann went on again, choosing her words warily, much as yesterday at one moment in her interrogatory Betty herself had done—concealing something, too, just as Betty had done. "I had promised faithfully to write it. But the address was downstairs in Betty's room. It was the address of a doctor," and having said that, it seemed that she had cleared her obstacle, for she went on in a more easy and natural tone.

"You know what it is, Monsieur Hanaud. I had been playing tennis all the afternoon. I was pleasantly tired. There was a letter to be written with a good deal of care and the address was all the way downstairs. I said to myself that I would think out the

UNCLE WIGGILY

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE HONEYSUCKLE

Outside of Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow grew a vine of honeysuckle. The leaves were a bright green and the flowers, when first they bloomed, were pure white. But, as the flowers grew older they changed to a rusty brown in color, though this did not matter, since they only gave out a more delightful perfume.

One day, as Uncle Wiggily was about to hop forth to look for an adventure, as he did every morning, the rabbit gentleman heard a sad and sighing voice that seemed to come from the honeysuckle vine.

"Are any of my new little rabbit children hiding there to play a trick on me?" asked the bunny gentleman. "Who is sighing so sadly?"

"I am," answered the vine, swaying in the wind and giving off a sweet smell.

"Why are you sad?" asked the bunny.

"Because I do not seem to be of any use in this world," answered the vine. "Here I must stay, year after year, in the same place, only climbing a little higher, but going nowhere, seeing nothing but the same bungalow and doing nothing—having no adventures, such as you have. Oh, I am so tired of it all!"

"And yet I should miss you if you no longer climbed up the side of my bungalow," said the rabbit gentleman softly. "I should miss you very much. Honeysuckle!"

"You might, but no one else would," sighed the vine. "I do not seem to be of any use in this world. I think I shall let myself wither away and die."

"You must not talk that way—it isn't right," said the bunny uncle, trying to think of some way to cheer up the honeysuckle. And just then Weezie, one of the little rabbit girls, ran up to her new daddy crying:

"Oh, I've lost my skipping rope and I can't jump and have fun. Will you please take me to the five and six cent store, Daddums, and buy me a new skipping rope?"

Uncle Wiggily looked at the honeysuckle, and saw, dangling from it, many long strands which were just like skipping ropes.

"May I take a piece of you for Weezie?" asked the bunny of the vine.

"Of course you may," said the honeysuckle with a sigh. "Take as many strands as you like. It matters not to me."

So Uncle Wiggily gnawed off a number of vine ropes which he tossed to Weezie, telling her to give them to her sisters.

"Oh, now we'll never have to buy any more skipping ropes," laughed the little rabbit girl, as she ran away. And hardly had she gone that a hummingbird flew down to the vine, fluttering his wings at Uncle Wiggily.

"I am so glad this vine is here," sang the bird. "It has the sweetest honey of all the flowers."

"That's what I say, also," chimed in a butterfly who alighted on a blossom near the hummingbird and uncoiled his long, thin, black tongue which he thrust deep into the long blossoms. The blossoms on a honeysuckle vine are so deep that only hummingbirds and butterflies, or creatures like that, can sip the sweet juice from them. Bees can not.

The hummingbird and butterfly, after taking as much honey as they wanted, flew away. And just then the Fuzzy Fox, who had been creeping up on Uncle Wiggily, tried to jump out from behind a tree to nibble the bunny gentleman's ears. But the wind blew a loop of the strong vine around the legs of the Fox, tripping him so that he fell, and before he could get up, Uncle Wiggily had jumped in his bungalow and locked the door. Then the Fox untangled himself from the vine and ran away just as the Police Dog marched past.

"Well, Honeysuckle," laughed Uncle Wiggily, coming out again. "what do you say now? You provided jumping ropes for my little rabbit girls, you gave honey to the hummingbird and butterfly and you saved me from the Fox. I call that being of some use in the world."

"Yes, I guess it is," laughed the vine, and it was sad no longer. For there is nothing better to cure sadness than to help some one. And if the bath room sponge doesn't get its feet wet when it has a swimming race with the cake of soap, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the toothache.

Modern Shop for Care Of Hair Opened Here

One of the most modern and best-equipped shops for the care of the hair and scalp has just been opened at 333 North Brand boulevard, in the rear of the Lexington Beauty Salon. The proprietors are Miss Lucia K. Hicks, a well-known Santa Barbara business woman, and Mrs. Aletha McCormick, a graduate nurse with wide experience in natural methods for the care of the skin and body.

This establishment is a parlor de luxe in every sense. It is said that the use of really scientific methods presents the only solution for hair and scalp troubles. Soothing oils, pure soaps and soft water used in conjunction with scientific technique are claimed to be an absolute cure for hair and skin diseases, by the proprietors. It is pointed out that the treatments received here are unique, not only because of the scientific methods used, but also because of the thoroughness with which they are administered.

MUSICAL TREAT PRESENTED IN CITY

Concert At Van Grove Salon
 By Glendale Art Club
 Proves Success

The concert given under the auspices of the Glendale Art association at the Van Grove studio last night was said to be one of the best musical programs sponsored by any club in Glendale. Artists from Europe, musicians from the Orient, and American entertainers were heard.

Feodor Kolin, Polish composer-pianist, played for the first time in this country, the second act of his ballet "La Primavera," including spring dance, a frolic and a bacchanalia. Dr. Kolin preceded his performance with an outline of the history of the composition, the theme of which is taken from a story woven round Botticelli's "La Primavera." He played for an encore, "Hymn of the Sun."

A surprise feature was the introduction of Georgi Shkultsevit, baritone of the operatic stage, who sang an aria from "The Magic Flute" (Mozart) and "When the King Goes Forth to War," in Russian, and numbers in Italian and English, with accompaniment by Dr. Kolin. This singer is new to the coast, a native of Riga, and graduate of a conservatory in Moscow. He has been directing an opera company touring the Orient.

Others On Program
 Rose Victoria Johnson, coloratura soprano, possess a voice of unusual clearness and rare charm. Her best offering was "Caro Nome" aria from "Rigoletto" (Verdi).

Fumi Iwasaki, young Japanese pianist, in Oriental costume, gave a charming interpretation of "Kamemno Ostrom" (Rubenstein). Beulah Starr Lewis, monologist, heard in the city for the first time, gave "Fras Jachemo."

The affair was well patronized, and the program followed by an informal reception. A number of pictures donated by club members were sold. Booths, where Mrs. B. S. Warner directed the sale of candy, and Mrs. J. W. Cotton, the fruit punch, were popular attractions. Mrs. Roy A. Ballagh, president, presided as hostess, and directed the program.

BURBANK NEWS

BURBANK, June 6.—Though conditions in Burbank made it necessary for the Greater San Fernando Valley association to postpone a campaign to raise $150,000 as an advertising fund, until June 8, a fund of more than $75,000 has already been assured that association, with less than a third of the ownership solicited, it is reported. More than 90 per cent of property owners approached have contributed to the fund, according to A. Z. Taft, Jr., president of the association.

Mr. and Mrs. Extra Christian and children of Sunset Canyon drive will leave June 14 for an eastern journey of several weeks. Christian has been selected delegate by the local club of the International Kiwanis convention, to be held at St. Paul. They will visit relatives at Racine, Wis.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Wilson and daughter, Florence, 719 Orange Grove avenue, are leaving by automobile for Warren, Ohio, their former home, after living for a year in Burbank.

A test well for oil will be drilled in the San Fernando valley, north east of the Roscoe school grounds. Leases have been obtained on 100 acres at an option price of $2.50 per acre with a royalty of eight cents per barrel. Drilling is expected to begin soon.

 THAT RUMPELSTILTZKIN IS MY NAME.

YOU MAY BE SURE THE MESSENGER WHISPERED THE NAME TO THE QUEEN SO WHEN THE LITTLE MAN CAME AND SAID, "WELL, NOW, WHAT IS MY NAME?" THE QUEEN ANSWERED, "IS IT HENRY?" "NO!" "IS IT CONRAD?" "NO!" "WELL, THEN PERHAPS IT IS RUMPELSTILTZKIN?" "THE LITTLE MAN WAS BESIDE HIMSELF WITH RAGE."

WHAT WICKED ELF HAS TOLD YOU THAT? HE SCREAMED, AND IN HIS ANGER STAMPED HIS FOOT SO VIOLENTLY THAT IT BROKE THROUGH THE FLOOR OF THE CASTLE AND THROUGH THE HOLE THE LITTLE MAN DISAPPEARED AND WAS NEVER SEEN FROM THAT DAY TO THIS.

Says English Husbands Best

What country has the finest husbands? England, declares MISS ISABEL DEANS, called the most beautiful of the younger British actresses. Her authority for the statement is being questioned, since she has no husband.

One Killed In Sewer Trench Cave-In Here

deeper and deeper into the ditch in the search for bodies. Emergency braces were made to prevent further cave-ins from the smashed and twisted timbers that had been used in the original bracing of the ditch. But every few moments there were other tiny slides, any one of which might have caused the whole side of the trench to drop on top of the score of workers below.

On miniature slide covered Pombo after he had been found alive. Frantically the fresh sand was shoveled and scraped away until his head again appeared above the surface.

Then one hand was feebly raised in a futile attempt to shake the hands of his rescuers. One lone tear of magnificent gratitude welled in his eye, paused, and fell to wet the sand that had nearly become his tomb. Then, mumbling as best he could with parched throat, he asked for water. A hundred hands hurried to pass it down to him, and then he had to be warned to quaff only a little lest it kill him.

Grieves Onlookers

A canvas stretcher was passed down and Pombo was laid on it. As it was raised by willing hands above the edge of the trench, and Pombo raised his right hand in greeting to the crowd of more than 5,000 people who were cheering their necks, a hushed cheer and great applause answered him.

Dr. G. Kaemmerling, city physician, made a hasty examination of the rescued man, and then he was placed in an ambulance and rushed to the Glendale hospital.

An emergency hospital had been prepared in the Holland garage, 341 Colorado street, into which Moore was rushed after he was pulled from the grip of the sand and earth in the trench by ropes. He had been in the trench for more than an hour. For nearly an hour and a half the rescue squads headed by Fire Chief A. H. Lankford of Glendale and another rescue squad No. 1 from the Los Angeles fire department worked over the body with pulmotors, but there was no spark of life.

Caught In Slide

Caskey was standing beside the trench when it caved, and was partially buried in the disaster. He managed to squirm out of the clutches of the engulfing sand with the aid of others who rushed to help him. Nearly hysterical, he was taken into the Holland garage and given first aid. Later he was taken to his home at the K. C. club where he changed clothes and returned to direct the rescue work.

Palmer, who was laying pipe in the bottom of the trench when the slide started, had started to run when he was caught and buried nearly to his waist. He pulled himself out, cried for help, seized a shovel and began to dig for his buried comrades.

Diaz was also partially buried in the slide, but, like Palmer, he managed to crawl out, fighting his way through sliding sand, dirt and asphalt blocks.

The slide occurred during the heavy gust of wind and down-pour of rain a few moments before 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Despite the fact that the walls of the trench were braced and timbered at five-foot intervals, the rain apparently had weakened the sand walls. When they started to give way, the timbers were crushed and ground, a slide of the trench about fifty feet in length caved in, leaving the pavement above to carry on top of it hundreds of tons of sand and dirt that had been hoisted there by the big trench digger.

Then the whole mass gave way. It all happened in an instant, before Moore sitting near the top of the trench, so that he was not

Santa Monica Woman Hurt In Auto Crash

An attempt to cross San Fernando road to purchase fruit at a roadside stand late yesterday, nearly cost the life of Mrs. G. C. Deltzer, Kensington court, Santa Monica, when she was struck by an automobile driven by Thomas P. Walker, 74 Olive avenue, Burbank.

Mrs. Deltzer, passenger in an automobile driven by R. T. Deltzer of Santa Monica, that was parked by the side of the road opposite a fruit stand near Grover street, got out of the machine to follow two others across the Boulevard to the roadside store. A sister, who had not left the car saw the Walker machine approaching and cried out to Mrs. Deltzer to get out of the road. Before she could leap to safety the automobile had struck her, injuring her severely. She was taken to the Burbank hospital, where she is recovering.

Walker said that he was driving at a cautious rate of speed, and that after he heard the sister cry out, he did not know what Mrs. Deltzer was going to do. He applied his brakes but could not stop the machine in the twenty feet that separated him from Mrs. Deltzer.

LIQUOR VANISHES

SAN DIEGO, June 6.—The coast guard cutter Tamaroa, in port here today, reported the overhauling of a rum running speedboat two days ago in San Pedro channel. The smuggler was sighted, decks piled high with case goods, making for the mainland. The Tamaroa gave chase and when it became apparent she had the greater speed, the crew of the rum runner heaved the liquor overboard with such alacrity that when overhauled and boarded a half hour later not a bottle was to be found as evidence.

more than a foot from safety, had no time to leap. He went down with the sand and blocks to his death.

Officials in Charge
City Manager V. B. Stone, Fire Chief John D. Fraser, Captain Lankford, Captain Dodsworth, City Engineer J. F. Johannsen and other city officials responded to immediate calls for help. Men were sent by the scores to dig. Housewives in the vicinity prepared hot water, made coffee and sandwiches and sent them out to the workers.

The diggers and hundreds of spectators were endangered when the police were hard put to keep the crowds back from the edge of the trench. Several times it was feared the whole side would collapse.

Upon a call for more men to help in the rescue work, S. C. Singer, manager of the Southern California Gas Co., dispatched a crew of thirty-two men under L. L. Biggs and Walter Piper, to the scene of the cave-in. Until the rescue of both men was effected, the gas company workers helped in the work, mucking with shovels and picks in the narrow ditch.

An inquest over the body of Moore will be held this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the mortuary of the J. E. Phillips Undertaking Co.

Both drivers applied the brakes, but because of the wet, slippery condition of the pavement, the cars skidded into each other with considerable force. Cates was treated for cuts and bruises in a nearby drug store.
